They have prepared for the use of women in general, five preparations for improving the complexion and the hair.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President,
WILLIAM MCKINLEY,
Of Ohio.

For Vice President,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
Of New York.

Four achievements in the management of the public finances and revenues under the administration of President McKinley stand out with marked prominence: First, in point of success, is the Dingley tariff; second, the reform in currency; third, the war loan of 1898; and fourth, the settlement of the Pacific railroad indebtedness. Perhaps never before in the history of this country have so many important fiscal achievements been accomplished in so short a time.

In President McKinley, the people have a man of high character, unimpaired reputation, unswerving patriotism, and a stronger candidate than he was in 1896, because his remarkable experience has strengthened and broadened him and better equipped him for executive duties. In Governor Roosevelt the people have a representative of the stalwart Americanism of the day, and a man as closely identified with the policy of expansion as is the president himself. They make a strong team.

The sentiment in favor of the passage of the ship subsidy bill grows stronger and stronger all over the country as the statistics of our foreign trade for the fiscal year just ended are studied.

The Benton Tribune in its last issue prints a strong editorial relative to the congressional contest in this district. The article should attract attention, for the Tribune very properly says the district must get from under the heels of the gang now in control, though it errs in naming men to do this work who are among the very gang it condemns, viz: Hendrick, James, Garnett, Crossland and George. But the Tribune means well and the Sun wishes it success in its efforts to purify the politics of the section and the state. It certainly sounds a timely warning to the people of the district.

The silver plank of the Kansas City convention is very weak when compared to that passed at the Chicago convention. The anti-trust plank very frail if they did not ruin it entirely. Then the Kansas City plank is remarkable for what it doesn't say more than for what it does say. The fact is, the plank is only a piece of ventriloquism.

Beckham will have to take the gubernatorial nomination. At the last moment it will be refused by all the other candidates, for it will be clear to them that defeat awaits the nominee of a faction in such bad repute as will be in evidence Saturday when the county conventions are held.

A FAUCIAL POSITION.
Lexington Herald (Dem): "It must be quite amusing to a Kentucky Democrat to smile in a platform which denounces government by injunction, when the present government in Kentucky rests largely upon injunction, or upon a double-action and new discovery in injunction. Perhaps no account in America is as notorious for the number, nature and scope of its injunctions as the Franklin circuit court, and all of its injunctions have been approved by the court of appeals."

"The title of the state election board rests upon that peculiar injunction which Judge Cantrell invented, where he first granted an injunction, and then of his own motion dissolved it, which order by the court of appeals was so reversed and so affirmed as to give authority to that board, and the only title of those gentlemen who hold the state offices, rather than governor and lieutenant governor, is based upon the judgment of that board, so that the government of Kentucky today is entirely, except as to its governor, under and by virtue of injunctions."

"Kentucky illustrates the benefits, virtues and efficiency of government by injunction, and our excellent friend, Governor McCreary, was probably the only member of the Kentucky delegation who had sufficient self-control to prevent a smile from passing over his face when the Kansas City convention vociferously denounced government by injunction."

A VALUABLE INVENTION.
A new foreign invention is called the telephonograph. As implied in the name it is a combination of the telephone and phonograph, to be used in recording messages received during the absence of the operator. A circular report from Dr. Warner, of Leipzig, says the telephonograph was invented by a Dane by the name of Paulsen.

The person called upon only to hold the trumpet to his ear, upon returning to the office, even after an absence of days, to receive the message. Many inventors have tried to effect such a combination, but all failed on account of the difficulty of transferring the message onto a wax cylinder. Instead of a wax cylinder Paulsen used a flexible steel band in his phonograph, which is much simpler in construction than the Edison phonograph. Messages are much more easily removed from the steel band than from the wax cylinder. It is wound on two spools, moving quickly from one to the other and coming in contact with a very small electro-magnet, switched into the circuit, which affects the steel band in such a way as to record on it any sounds that may penetrate to the phonograph. It is only necessary to cause the steel band to revolve the magnet in order to have the sounds repeated. Each vibration of the electro-magnet produces a corresponding vibration of the steel band. In order to remove a message from the steel band, a magnet is passed over the surface on which the message was recorded.

The machine has been tested by practical men and scientists, with excellent practical results.

Republicanism is full of promise to the people. The Louisville Commercial states the fact tersely thus: "The business men of this country, the professional man, the laborer, the mechanic, the worker in every field of usefulness, have much to be grateful for in return for the skill, wisdom and prudence which the Republican party has shown in the management of governmental affairs. The fact that under McKinley and Roosevelt the same conservative course will be pursued carries with it assurance of safety at home and abroad, the continuance of protection to manufacturers, the maintenance of the public credit, and all the other safe guards to the business and property of the citizen and the welfare and power of the nation, to which the Republican party stands irrevocably committed. If the voters of this country want a continuance of the good times, which are shared even by the humblest, with a sound currency, all the blessings that go with material success they will support McKinley. If they want to delude the dollar, cut its purchasing power in half and send a chill of uncertainty through every line of trade; if they want to pull down the flag in the Philippines and withdraw from the markets of the Orient; if they want low wages and bankruptcy, they will support Bryan."

A DEFICIT PROBABLE.
The state board of equalization completed its labors, filing in the office if the state auditor a report showing that although the total value of all property subject to taxation is increased nearly $12,000,000 the state will realize in taxes this year nearly $237,000 less than it did last year. This is due to the decrease in the rate from 52 1/2 cents to 47 1/2 cents. There may be a deficit in the state treasury.

A Talented Colored Man.
There is a colored man working as a bootblack in Pittsburg who is a graduate from the highest college in the land, the Propaganda at Rome; who reads and writes thirteen languages, speaking nine fluently; who stood third in a class of 500, and who ranked a fine and logical debater. This man, who goes by the name of W. J. Reed, has also occupied some high positions but through drink ruined his health and lost his standing. He is now too feeble to do much work, but has reformed and promises to again redeem himself in the esteem of the people who once knew him. Reed has been well over the world and the story of his life properly told would no doubt make an interesting book.

II. H. Hanna, of Indianapolis, founder of the sound money organization in 1896, has this to say:—"All the friends of sound money will enthusiastically co-operate to secure the success of the party which has responded to our appeals."

He also adds that the sound money plank in the Republican platform—"Will give the sound money Democrats something to hope for and work for in a continuation of the present party in power. It will arouse the interest of the business men and present an issue of the future which they can heartily endorse and actively support. I think the sound money Democrats under these circumstances will vote the Republican ticket, or, even if they do not care to do that, they will not go further than to refuse to vote at all."

Last year was a good one for patents, the number issued by Uncle Sam being 26,540, a record-breaking year in this particular.

Observationsat Random

James Lane Allen's "The Helen of Lan," a story of the Kentucky Camp Fields, (The Mcmillan Company, New York), is an attractive volume of 385 pages with eight steel engraving illustrations, a hero whose surname is left to conjecture and a heroine whose first appearance on the scene is on page 197.

As the book has not yet been extensively read or reviewed, it is impossible to determine how it will be received. But it can hardly be predicted that the story will be popular, although doubtless the fact that James Lane Allen is the author will have a great deal to do with its not being called stupid.

The first chapter is devoted to hemp culture, now almost obsolete in Kentucky, and is not pleasant reading to those who like to get into a story, although it is very likely a good description of hemp growing.

The book has few characters, and not a surname is given, though this cannot be deemed a disadvantage—only a peculiarity. The story revolves about "David," who is a country boy of illiterate and uninteresting parents, whom he one day astonishes by announcing that he is going to be a preacher. They were probably astonished because they felt so inferior to being responsible for such an ambition. So by dint of hard work and sagacious economy David contrived to raise the funds necessary to a course in the "Bible college." The father's hopes for the son were high, but the latter, having an investigative mind, heard his preacher abasing another church one day, and straightway visited that other church to see the dignity for himself. He found things about the same as at the other church, but this preacher uncomplimentary remarks about another church prompted him to go there. In a few weeks he had come to all the churches, had heard every preacher prove that every other denomination was wrong except his own—and wound up by not believing any of them. He bought up scientific books and began to read. The result was his conduct, which had been ere this noticed, resulted in his expulsion from college and church. When he went home and told them, his father exclaimed in his anger and disappointment: "I always knew there was nothing in you!"

This seems to have been a pretty good guess and the father's opinion will doubtless be shared by a great many readers of the book. It is along here that Gabriella appears. David is in love with her and without any apparent effort and omitting practically all detail, he wins her love and then contracts pneumonia. As usual she nurses him through and a letter feeling is inspired in the household. He decides to go elsewhere, which he might reasonably have decided when he came home disgraced; as he could have seen had he been a person of intelligence that he wasn't welcome. And he is to take Gabriella with him—and go through college and live off her poor little salary which she had saved while a school teacher.

In brief, "The Helen of Lan" drags considerably although the style is in the author's standard, but the fact that a writer of note is its author will not help everybody worry along until he gets interested. The modern book should have an attractive heroine—in this book the pages are marred by a female of any description, through two-thirds of the book—with the uninteresting exception of an occasional appearance of David's mother.

The whole story is built up around David, and he will strike the average reader, it is vented, as being a very commonplace sort of youth, if not absolutely stupid in many ways—that of course the author may have intended him so, and that's his business. It is hardly reasonable, however, to expect the public to go into ecstasies over such a hero. Doubtless we could all have done better! But to sum it all up in a few words, the general verdict of those who have read "The Helen of Lan" is that it is a disappointment. It teaches nothing new, embraces few and mediocre characters, and can hardly be said to be worth reading with so much more entertaining literature on the market, unless it is simply to find out just how badly some of our best authors can sometimes write.

Paducah's motorman as a whole, are a nice, courteous and moral set of men, but occasionally one manages to creep in who hasn't common sense enough to hoist his umbrella when it rains—provided, of course, he had an umbrella and knew what it was for. This kind are not supposed to run a car, however, and should be reported by the public to the management for dismissal. These remarks are prompted by an incident such as ought never to occur. A drunken man boarded a car crowded with ladies, children and gentlemen, and began to use the most profane, vilest and indecent and shocking language that ever befouled the atmosphere of even the most depraved localities. Instead of the motorman stopping the car and putting the man off, or, if he was afraid, of stopping as some one else could, he went ahead as if he were deaf to the flow of offensive obscenity inside, and there the poor, embarrassed ladies and frightened children had to sit and listen until the end of the line was reached, when the motorman leisurely sent for an officer. It would make one wonder how many ladies in the past had paid it wouldn't hurt him to hold it if he concluded himself as did the man in question. Drunken men should never be permitted to board a street car—as a protection to the public, if not to the company, which subjects itself to having to pay for killing or injuring one every time it permits one to get aboard. The motorman who suffered each incident as that above mentioned is no doubt a new one, and the most charitable apology to make for the serene stupidity he displayed on the occasion is that he was so dull and unsophisticated he didn't know the meaning of the words he heard and probably thought the man was saying his prayers to Chinese.

Mr. James McKimney, former steward of the city hospital, has patented a method of "rafting" logs that promises to revolutionize rafting to some extent. The old way was by boring holes in each log and joining it to the next by stails and crosspieces. Mr. McKimney, however, joins them by a system of wiring, having the wire around each log. It is impossible for the logs to get away, each log bearing the other, and a raft bound together so can stand astonishing shocks and in several instances where lumber have knocked down large trees against which the raft struck, and yet the force did not in the least disturb the raft.

STORY OF THE YAZOO FRAUD.

It Was One of the Most Gigantic Traps Ever Known in America.

From the St. Paul Globe: One of the most gigantic trusts ever formed on this continent was in the early days of the republic, back in 1793.

Several gentlemen organized themselves into a company for the purpose of purchasing from the state of Georgia her unclaimed western territory, extending from the Mississippi on the west to the Atlantic on the east, and from the thirty-first degree of latitude north of the equator on the south to the southern boundary of Tennessee on the north, including what now constitutes the territory of Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi. This vast territory was purchased for $500,000, and this was the commencement of the famous "Yazoo fraud," about which so much was said and written. The bill authorizing the purchase and sale passed the Georgia legislature on Jan. 3, 1795, and it is said that members were paid all the way from eight negroes to 200,000 acres of land to vote for it. Corruption by bribery was open. Great indignation spread throughout the state, and upon the assembling of the legislature one year later an act was passed declaring that the said rascally act was null and void; that the records relating to the same be burned in order that no trace of this transaction should remain public.

"The infamous records were placed in one vast heap," said the senator, "and a sun glass was used to set it on fire, that it might be said that the fire that destroyed it was from heaven. This is the first and only instance in the history of the country where a legislative body personally superintended the destruction of its own previous records of corrupt and obnoxious laws. I regret to say that if the people of this day should be moved by the same spirit, this continent would be a scene of fire from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Gulf of Mexico to the confines of the British empire."

The Way to the New Depot is Still Too Dark.

The city's three new lights, placed on the route to the Illinois Central depot, are not giving satisfaction, as they are insufficient to give the desired light.

The distance from the old lights to the new depot is half a mile or more, and three lights are hardly a drop in a bucket, some of the kickers complain, although they are better than no light at all.

No light is being in one of the worst places—the bend in the street, where a hold up is likely to occur any night.

WANTED ELSEWHERE.

Richards and Wilkerson May Be Desperate Characters.

Acting Marshal Harlan has received several letters from Rockport, Cloverport, Leitchfield and other places relative to the safe houses, Richards and Wilkerson, in jail here for blowing Mr. Cal Waggoner's safe.

Several safes, most all of them in postoffice, have been blown with nitro glycerine, and it is thought these are the men. In nearly every instance the safes blown were near towns in which Wells & West's circus was showing.

BOLIN ACQUITTED.

He Bought the Whip and Gave Evidence Proving the Statement.

James Bolin, driver of one of Nelson's ice wagons, was acquitted on a charge of stealing a whip belonging to Mr. Henry Bogens, in the police court this morning.

He proved that he bought the whip from another driver named Thompson, and the latter proved that the whip was thrown into his wagon by a colored boy.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS.

Many women suffer all sorts of so-called "female weaknesses" simply because their kidneys are out of order and they have a right to know FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is just what is needed by most ailing women.

The new city charter of Havana will go into effect this week. It gives the municipality more power than was ever enjoyed before, and the officials are quite independent of the central or provincial government. Charters for other cities are to be granted as rapidly as they can be drawn.

If you are sick all over and don't know what ails you, it's ten to one your kidneys are out of order. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE will make healthy kidneys and pure blood. Nothing else.

S. H. Winstead.

It is reported at Chicago that the Chicago and Alton, the Kansas City Southern and the Union Pacific railroads are to be united in one system, and that Stuart H. Knott will be vice president of the consolidated system, to be elevated soon to the presidency, President Felton going to New York as chairman of the board of the three companies.

The blood is strained and purified by the kidneys. No hope of health while the kidneys are wrong. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE will make healthy kidneys and pure blood. Nothing else.

"Just as good."
